MONUMENTS.

The White Bronze Monument,

beautiful in design, appropriate in color, never tarnishes, chips or cracks, and science in its long search for something that would stand the frost of this climate for monumental purposes has at last found it in the White Bronze. It fills every wish. It is a beauty to be held. It will perpetuate the memory of loved ones, that future generations may bestow those little acts of kindness upon the graves after we have gone to our reward.

White Wyandottes.

The White Wyandotte is a good-sized blocky bird, especially well furnished with meat in the breast—just where it is required for table purposes. In addition to this the yellow skin and white pen feathers make them a fine market fowl. Being a small-boned fowl, their weight is in the meat, as compared with fowls of heavier frame. For broilers and roasters they lead, as they are hardy, chicks grow fast, and they stand forcing well. In this particular they gain a point on the Plymouth Rocks, which are very liable to leg weakness during forcing.

We find with our birds that until the chicks weigh about a pound or a pound and a half, they grow very few feathers, their gain being in their plump bodies. Chicks that grow in this manner are hardier and grow faster than those that exhaust their strength by feathering out early. The pullets mature early not frequently laying at five months. They are the best layers of their class of fowls, thus gaining another point on their nearest competitors, the Plymouth Rocks.

By the time the fowls reach the laying age they should be carefully selected for next years breeders, culling out all birds with single combs, feathered legs, etc., with the same care that a fancier would use, for when you are through breeding next season you can get a fair price for them from fanciers, especially those who are beginning and want good stock at a low price. The culls, both males and females should be fattened for the next two weeks, then sent to market. If, as should be the case, you have nothing but good, pure stock, you can realize a good return by selling your surplus males as breeders, if you do not charge too great a price. We have found that there is a good demand for White Wyandotte breeding males at about a dollar and a half or two dollars.

We do not advise breeding Wyandottes much over standard weight. So far as our experience goes, matings in which the birds were much over weight have not given general satisfaction. A point of considerable advantage to breeders of limited room is the fact that the Wyandottes stand confinement well.

We believe that our experience enables us to assert the White Wyandottes to be the best all-round fowl.—Reliable Poultry Journal.

How He Knew The Score.

A couple of Topeka poultrymen were going out on the street car the other evening, and were talking chickens at a good lively rate. A stranger sitting across the aisle, who they claim was a preacher, became much interested in their conversation, and the three got to talking. In fact, even the motorer, who was also a chicken crank, was keeping his weather eye turned towards them.

The stranger said he had some mighty good birds—had one Plymouth Rock cock that scored 97 points. Our friends became quite interested in their new found acquaintance, and asked him where he got such a good bird. "Oh, just picked him up," said he, "I got him for a dollar." "Ninety-seven points is a pretty good score for a White Rock, isn't it?" queried the poultrymen. "Who scored your bird, and where was he scored?" "Don't know," replied the preacher.

"How do you know, then, that he scores so high?" was asked. "How do I know? why, that is the number on his leg band."

And the car nearly ran away, the motorer took such a fit.—Poultry West.

How to Clip the Wings.

There is a right and a wrong way to clip the wings of a fowl. Mr. T. S. McGillivray, in farming, expressed his views of the subject as follows:

"We hope to be pardoned for saying that, if there is a marked stupidity among the fraternity, it is the usual way we find fanciers clipping birds' wings, including poultry. This stupidity is not confined to the novice alone, but we find it in old poultry fanciers. The old instruction solemnly spoken was, 'Clip only one wing, so that the bird cannot balance. If you clip the two it can fly.' This advice has gone from mouth to ear for generations given by wise acres whose information is all founded on antiquated hearsay, and who never investigate for themselves. The average fancier clips the wing while it is closed. In this way one cannot help not only disfiguring the bird, but the heavy warm feathers which grow on the half of the wing next to the body, and which nature intends more as a coverlet to keep the bird warm than to assist in flight, are removed. Right under this warm coverlet of feathers is the lung, and when this part of the wing has been removed, there is nothing to protect the lung, and it may be noticed that there is almost a bare spot so far as body feathers are concerned. The sleet and wet falling on the unprotected lung causes pneumonia, which is followed by a lingering death or a delicate bird."

"Experience and experiments prove that birds after a little practice fly higher and farther with only one wing clipped than with two. When only one is clipped they are apt to injure themselves by going with great force against the weakened side."

HOW TO CLIP.

"Extend the wing fully. Then cut each pinion feather between the shaft and quill from the middle of the wing to the top. Do the same with the other wing, and all is right. The bird cannot fly; he is not disfigured (in fact when walking round you could not tell that the wings were clipped); and his lungs are still protected by nature's coverlets."

HOW TO PINION.

"It is generally recommended to pinion pheasants at two months old. We have performed the little operation at all ages, and never had one die from the effect."

"The operation requires no skill. It means to take a pair of scissors and clip the wings off at the first joint. The birds never seem to mind it, and in less than a week it is all healed over. This, of course, would not do for birds that were intended to be let loose in a game preserve, as they can never fly again. But for breeding stock, to be fenced in fields, it is much better than running the risk of watching and clipping their wings when necessary."

Hen Would Adopt Kittens.

An Auburn lady tells of a curious incident that came to her notice recently. A sitting hen stole away her nest, but after a day or two the nest was discovered, and the eggs were taken away. Soon after a cat that had three little kittens found the nest and took it as a home for her young ones.

The old hen had remained on the nest part of the time, and near it all the time, and when she saw the kittens there she seemed to regard them as her progeny. At any rate she adopted them straightway, and didn't propose to let the cat have anything more to do with them. She would hover them in the nest, and cluck to them with the greatest complacency. The cat didn't want to give up her children, and the hen and the cat had a pitched battle.

The result was a division of the spoils. The cat ran away with one of the kittens, while the hen remained in possession of the two others. A member of the family discovered the hen's theft, however, and restored the kittens to their real mother. The old hen made such a time about it that she had to be fastened up in a coop.—Kennebec

"More haste, less speed," hasten slowly," are proverbs born of experience that some things can't be hurried without loss and waste. That is specially true of eating. The railway lunch habit, "five minutes for refreshments," is a habit most disastrous to the health. You may hurry your eating. You can't hurry your digestion, and the neglect to allow proper time for this important function is the beginning of sorrows to many a busy man. When the tongue is foul, the head aches, when there are sour or bitter risings, undue fullness after eating, hot flushes, irritability, nervousness, irresolution, cold extremities, and other annoying symptoms, be sure the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition have "broken down." Nothing will re-establish them in active healthy operation so quickly as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It strengthens the stomach, nourishes the nerves, purifies the blood, and builds up the body. It is a strictly temperance medicine containing no alcohol or other intoxicant. Given away.
